Light Tones Harmonize Best With Wall Papers

Light tones in wall and ... paints harmonize best with wall p... pers and water paints, as well as with woodwork. Intense colors of some prepared paints can be lightened by adding white paint or by adding a complementary color. Buy the complementary colors as tubes of oil pigment and mix the pigment with turpentine to add to the paint for getting the desired tone.

Woodwork and doors painted the color of the wall make a room appear larger, and also help take notice away from any awkwardly designed woodwork or poorly placed windows or doors. Paint is better for ceilings than paper, as it has no seams, and does not discolor as easily. Use water paint if cost of paint is considered too high. ... even ... ceilings, as a rule, ... if it is in good condition, as seams would show and the paper might crack after the water paint dries.

To make paint last longer and to make cleaning easier, use paste wax on window sills, space around door knobs and mouldings above baseboards.

New Comforts Ease Rural Life

Increase in Use of Electric Power Alters Standard Of Life in Country.

Special—WNU Features.

CHICAGO. — "Going to bed with the chickens" is not the exclusive prerogative of country dwellers, according to a recent survey on the sleeping habits of the American public. City dwellers from New York to San Francisco get to bed about the same time as the small towner while the average urban retirement hour is not more than 20 minutes later than the time on the farm. Rising time, as a rule, ... minutes to an hour earlier because of such pre-breakfast chores as milking and feeding the stock. Rural electrification has done much to lengthen the after dark hours of farm families and the use of modern agricultural machinery has lessened the strain of farming so that the physical need for restorative sleep is lessened.

City slicker and country man each averages the normal eight hours these days although science indicates that the pastoral sleep is sounder as the combination of outdoor exercise and a more leisurely way of life combines to give it a greater therapeutic value. However, makers of sleep products claim that rural and small town populations seek the same bedtime comfort as the residents of metropolitan areas.

Seek Latest Comforts.

Pointing out that rural America has a higher standard of living than any other similar group in the world, they cite postwar demands from merchants in small communities for such modern innovations as bedboard reading lamps, chime tone alarm clocks and electronic blankets. Requests for this type of merchandise from all sections of the country is evidence of the increasing use of electric power in agricultural areas since all of these products operate on electricity. A case in point is the electronic tubes that control the flow of warmth in an all-woolen blanket. The sleeper may set the control for the desired degree of warmth for sleeping and regardless of changes in room temperature or body heat radiation the electronic tubes maintain the set level of heat accurately throughout the night.

Women Go for It.

One of the first electronic home products to make its appearance on the postwar scene, the manufacturers report that apparently it is as popular "down on the farm" as it is in city homes.

Double beds continue to retain their traditional popularity regardless of geography, according to the sleep survey, as 87 per cent of the married couples of the country use them. Wives who complain about their husbands reading in bed are in the minority for research shows more women read in bed than men and only 16 per cent of the people interviewed use any of the "slumber hour" programs on the radio for a sleep wooer.

Those people who can't get to sleep in unfamiliar surroundings can duplicate home sounds at least. Sleep shops now sell records with typical country night noises as well as the muted roar of the big city. Everything from a bird song to the honk of taxis. Sleep records are increasing in popularity. Jack Benny, for instance, is said to use one which lulls him with the fading clop-clop of horses' hooves.

Scientists state that the speed-up pace of wartime America caused lots of restless sleeping and jangled nerves but the postwar era and its developments will bring greater and better comfort and sleep will, as always, continue to be man's greatest restorative.

Minute Make-Ups

By GABRIELLE

The long face and long neck need the flattery of a soft, wide low pompadour. The back is done in a chignon of curls, caught in a net. The long neck is thus softened and flattered in contour. Note the wide double-fan style earrings. They add width to the contour. If the chignon is not held by a net or a snood, the hair should be done in the loose curls at the back, low on the neck. And, watch your makeup!

LOS ANGELES. — The Japs intercepted and broke U. S. weather codes, but failed to take full advantage of the information, Col. The... Gillenwaters, General MacArthur's top weatherman, said recently.

Gillenwaters, home on terminal leave, said the Japs got all the meteorological data they wanted, despite censorship rules against mentioning weather.

Visions City at North Pole Heated by Atoms

ST. LOUIS. — Cities at the North and South Poles — complete with airfields, hotels, homes and offices — are definite possibilities with the use of atomic energy for heat, in the opinion of Dr. J. C. Stearns, Washington university scientist.

"Since uranium is only one-quarter-millionth the volume of its equivalent in coal, transporting it to Arctic and Antarctic regions... would be quite practicable," Dr. Stearns told a student branch conference of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Dr. Stearns, who was director of Chicago university's metallurgical laboratory during work on the industrial application of atomic energy, said a North Pole city seemed more feasible at present because of the necessity for an airfield there if full use is to be made of the shortest air routes to cities in Europe and Asia.

Diaper Output Is Short 7,800,000, Official Says

NEW YORK — The nation's babies are short some 7,800,000 diapers a month, the Cotton Textile institute said recently.

The scarcity is so acute that the institute, through its birdseye diaper division, has appealed formally to the civilian production administration to grant price incentives to improve the supply.

Because of the shortage two national diaper services had to refuse service to 132,400 babies in 1945.

Atomic Explosion Gives Tenn. Cows White Hair

OAK RIDGE, TENN.—Cows near the first atomic explosion got some gray hair from the experience, but they are thriving on Oak Ridge grasslands.

"The cows have no more gray hair and there is no known change in their condition."

"Some tissue has been sent to Rochester, N. Y., for analysis, to determine if there was any change other than on the surface.

Overall Suit

The "knee pants" suit is a new two-piece outdoor fashion, combining separate sunback overalls and a full lined hip-length jacket. The fabric is smooth, hard-to-mus tegra. Bright rickrack braid edges the deep patch pockets and the top of the overalls.

Unidentified Hero Helped Out With Radar

NEW YORK.—An unidentified hero who rode astride radar equipment to the front of a blimps gondola on research tests enabled the navy to perfect the "bat," a glider bomb used successfully in late stages of the Pacific war, the Bell telephone laboratories said.

The bomb, with radar in its nose, automatically tracked enemy warships and merchantmen for miles, twisting and turning with them, until it hit the target.

In early tests the big problem was to learn what had gone wrong with boats failing to function. The hero's instruments told what was happening in the automatic controls of nearby flying "bats" as they tracked targets, leading to adjustments and improvements.

Nab Escaped Prisoner

One of a group of convicts who escaped in Buckingham County on Sunday while being carried to Richmond, was re-captured in dramatic fashion Monday night, according to E. T. Mitchell, Appomattox officer. Mr. Mitchell relates that just after dark Monday night, one of the escaped prisoners came to the farm of C. E. Lewis, Route 3, Appomattox, near the Buckingham line, asking for food.

Mr. Lewis was suspicious, and gave the man food, but while he was eating sent Robert Franklin boy car to Appomattox to secure the aid of officers. When the man had eaten, Mr. Lewis suggested that he was driving out to town, and offered a ride, hoping to meet the officers en route. Other men at the Lewis farm got in the car, and just as they neared Appomattox they were met by Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell got the man into his own car, and brought him to the Appomattox county jail. He reported that he had no trouble making the arrest.

We are also informed that local deputy David Roberts was instrumental in securing an admission of identity from the prisoner held here.

New Variety

Dean H. L. Price, VPI Agricultural School, and Dr. W. S. Flory, Jr., Experiment Station horticulturist, call an "accident of potato seedlings."

From a chance spoonful of potato balls, the two experimenters see fair promise of developing a new strain of late-summer potatoes. There are, said Dr. Flory, no known varieties of late potatoes particularly suitable to Virginia conditions, although Sequoia and Sebago have done reasonably well. The development of a strain which could be harvested just before the first killing frost would eliminate weight loss in potatoes through the summer, and would also solve the summer storage problem.

The seed balls were given to Dean Price by a friend who thought they looked "interesting." What varieties they came from is not known, but it is fairly certain that they are cross-pollinations.

Urges Registration

Senator Chas. T. Moses this week urged all discharged veterans to qualify themselves to vote in the August primary and reminded all citizens that July 6 is the deadline for registration.

Mr. Moses said: "If you want to qualify yourself to vote in the August Democratic Primary for United States Senator, and have not registered in person before one of the ten registrars, or transferred from your former voting precinct, to the one in which you now live, this is to urge you to do so now. You must do so before July 6 to vote in the August Primary. If you have been discharged from the armed services since January 1st, 1945, you do not have to pay any capitation tax, but be sure to register if you have not done so already. I also suggest that if you have any question about registering or any other matter in connection with voting, such as the rules for new voters, transfers and those becoming 21 years of age, that you go to see County Clerk C. W. Smith at the court house."

ARMY RECRUITER SEEKS SPECIALISTS

Under a new War Department Pamphlet, veterans may enlist in the New Regular Army in grade appropriate to their previous training and experience, S. Sgt. Torrence, Recruiting Point Commander of the Appomattox Recruiting Point announced today.

This new pamphlet lists many job titles not previously listed and gives opportunity for higher grades in many specialist fields. Since a greater opportunity is available for retaining rank, it is indicated that many veterans who were discharged early in the demobilization period and who were not eligible to re-enlist under current Army Regulations would be interested in this new pamphlet.

All veterans who were honorably discharged on or after May 12,1945 and within one year before, June 30, 1946 to gain the benefits of this new pamphlet. Airplane and engine mechanics, cooks, weather equipment technicians, welders, light tank crewmen, telephone operators, draftsmen, labor foremen, carpenters, musicians, and nearly four hundred other specialties are included in this list.

It is to the advantage of every honorably discharged veteran to find out if he is eligible to re-enlist in grade under this new pamphlet. PAULETTE, ALVIS HAVE NEW TYPE COMBINE

There are two of the new self-propelled combines in this county, belonging to J. P. Paulette and J. P. Alvis. Mr. Paulette was in the Times-Virginian office this week and stated that since these machines prevent much of the loss of grain from waste in tramping down of grain in the opening of fields, and that since there is a world demand to prevent waste of wheat, every effort would be made to make these combines available to as many farmers as possible during the current harvest period. In this way a contribution will be made toward meeting the world grain shortage.
